

The Right Hon. Edmund Burke.

On TUESDAY, August 1, 1797, will be published,

No. VII. PRICE 1S.

(BEING THE FIRST NUMBER OF THE SECOND VOLUME)

OF THE

MONTHLY VISITOR,

AND

POCKET COMPANION;

FOR JULY, 1797.

BY A SOCIETY OF GENTLEMEN.

A PORTRAIT OF MR. BURKE,

FROM AN ORIGINAL BUST;

With his Character by the late Right Hon. W. G. Hamilton, the reputed Author of the Letters of JUNIUS, never before published, will appear in the present Number of THE MONTHLY VISITOR. And, among a variety of interesting Papers, Sketches of the Republican Armies, communicated by a Friend in Germany;—a circumstantial and critical Account of the Monument just opened to GARRICK, in Westminster Abbey;—an original Biography of PARKER;—an Account of Colman's Heir at Law;—and a Review of the Novel of Azemia.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR THE PROPRIETORS:

And sold by H. D. SYMONDS, No. 20, Paternoster Row; where (post paid) Correspondents are requested to direct their Communications.

 The Portrait of THE ARCHDUKE CHARLES will be published with our Number for August. The Biography and the Portrait of Mr. BURKE having been some time in contemplation, we took this opportunity of giving our Readers an early account of a subject that will ever be interesting.

TO THE PUBLIC.

THE PROSPECTUS to THE MONTHLY VISITOR, gave promise of a work that should be devoted to the interests of Literature. It was proposed to soothe, with the endearments of Science, the weariness of political Discord; and to present such a choice of the agreeable and interesting, as might engage all conditions and all seasons. In times less distracted than the present, an undertaking so formed might have looked for every protection. When the arts of peace are in prosperity, even a mediocrity of talent is not altogether hopeless. Ill, indeed, would it comport with the feelings of those who are engaged in this Publication, to vaunt of their merits and their views. What they have hitherto done, is before an Impartial Tribunal. That Tribunal then will judge for themselves: for we propose not to insult them by saying, that the future should not be augured from the past. We would simply premise, that the Conductors of THE MONTHLY VISITOR are beings not exempt from defect; but mutable, and—they would think—improveable. As their failings have been re-proved, they have met reproof with reformation; and they contemplate of much for the satisfaction of their patrons. They are commencing another Volume of their labours, and they will not relax in endeavouring to deserve an increase of public favour.

The FIRST VOLUME of THE MONTHLY VISITOR contains the portraits of Chatterton, Gibbon, Erskine, Washington, Buonaparte, and Kosciuszko, with their respective biographies.

A circumstantial review of the THEATRES, and a critical account of the LITERATURE of the last six months, are articles that cannot be indifferent to the cultivated mind. Our POETRY is deserving of that title.

Such, in part, are the claims with which we look up to the determined friendship of our readers. Unconnected with parties, it has been our wish to evince the advantages of such a conduct; impartial we cannot be, if it be partial to espouse the truth.